

My course of study with Anna Salerno-Schoff has been a life-changing one. I began taking lessons with her six years ago when I stumbled upon her class at Pima Community College and began taking private lessons with her. This was the first opportunity I've ever had to take private lessons, and it's something that I've always wanted to do. During my time studying with Anna, I've gone from the singing a couple solos in a community college class to winning televised talent contests, performing in local theater productions, having my own band and being cast in a Broadway musical. Again, totally life-changing.

The voice lessons and life lessons I have learned from Anna have helped me to progress my singing career to levels I have never expected. I currently live in New York city where I performed on Broadway and continue to work as a singer and performer with some of the best actors and singers in the world. The techniques and skills I learned while studying with Anna Salerno-Schoff has allowed me to maintain my range and stamina while living in this big city. I have yet to find a voice teacher or coach in New York whose skill set and talent that can compare to that of Anna.
